Dear Friends,

This April, during Sexual Assault Awareness Month, I'm participating in Color It Blue, an annual campaign led by Brave Step.

Color It Blue encourages survivors, loved ones, allies and community members to start a ripple of influence, through our families, workplaces and communities, around the reality of sexual violence and the importance of support and prevention.

Sexual violence is a pervasive issue, and silence allows it to continue. By simply wearing blue, sharing resources or starting a compassionate conversation, we can help survivors feel seen and supported while helping prevent future harm.

I invite you to join me in Coloring It Blue this month. Together, our small actions can create meaningful change.
